

THANK YOU FOR YOUR INTEREST IN OUR ANIMALS.

Far from being show clipped neat and pretty, our wintery goats are typically scruffy, fat with pregnancy, and often dry during the holiday season. It is an interesting season for a northwest dairy goat breeder, perhaps the easiest of the goat seasons as the odd holiday time lodges itself squarely, and all too briefly, between the smelly breeding season and the intensive kidding season of the new year. And of course, it is a season to reminisce on the summer's show season, cross fingers that kids will be born healthy and of the desired gender, to fantasize of the fairs and road trips soon to come, and to enjoy time with family of both the two-legged and four-legged variety.

It is a season to enjoy the simple pleasures of watching our scruffy does navigate a surprise snow storm, flock to the pasture to enjoy a break of sun, or delight in the decadent evergreen treasures that fall during a wind storm. There is nothing quite like watching a herd of LaManchas decorate a Christmas tree or destroy the jack-o'-lanterns after Halloween. Here at Barnowl Farm, we make sure our hard showing, hard working does get the rest they deserve during this season and get to partake, in their own unique way, the festivities of the holidays.

Located in beautiful Vancouver, Washington, our herd of American and Purebred LaManchas encompasses a wide variety of national-quality blood lines, and with star milkers, SGCH show does, and Linear Appraised Excellents we are proud to introduce you to our rewarding herd. We invite you to peruse our holiday edition herd brochure. Orders are now being taken for 2011 kids and we have a handful of 2010 kids and mature does still for sale, inquire if interested. For more information on the herd, the animals, or the purchasing terms, contact us or visit our website—and keep an eye for our site to get a major facelift early in the new year! We wish you a very happy holiday season, a fruitful new year, and a healthy kidding season!

Happy Holidays,
Ardis & Mariah
